It's Her Story

It has been said that “stories change the world”. After hearing the many stories of women over many years, I believe this to be true. Our lives are our story and our story is our life. Each of our stories is a small piece of the greater story of God’s continual work and transforming power in our lives.

When we have the courage to share our stories-walls break down and shame is cast out. Stories have the power to build bridges and break down stereotypes. Relationships and connections are built on stories shared and how we came through each situation through the grace of God.

Women in Christian Leadership recognizes their Circle of Leaders

Women in Christian Leadership (WiCL) introduces you to the Circle of Leaders. Each of these women were invited into the circle for not only their gifts and talents that support WiCL but their servant hearts. And those in the circle soon learn, that when you become a leader in the Circle, that it really is a family, one that supports one another and comes together in good times and in bad, to encourage and to care, and to lift one another in prayer.
